YOUNG ENTREPRENEURS OF INDIA

From the streets of Lucknow to building one of the largest adtech companies in the world - Mohit Saxena - co-founder

InMobi

Mohit Saxena is one of the busiest people you'll ever meet. He Brought up in Lucknow, Mohit's father was working in the health department of the Uttar Pradesh government and his job involved a lot of traveling. Thus, it was his mother's company which ended up having a huge influence on him.

After Mohit cleared JEE, he was selected for IIT Roorkee. He opted for Metallurgical and Material Sciences engineering in IIT Roorkee the same year. Mohit also took C++ as an elective in the second year.

After engineering, Mohit got a job at Tata Steel. After this, Mohit joined AT&T Pacbell labs and went on his first US trip on Christmas Eve in 1998. After AT&T, Mohit joined Virgin Mobile, which had just entered US. Unlike AT&T, the culture was more of a startup and there were a lot of problems to solve. The initial team at Virgin Mobile USA was quite small and Mohit was managing the operation teams. This is where he got his hands dirty at scaling systems, an experience which would come handy later,

It was in 2007 that Mohit met Naveen Tewari, Amit Gupta and Abhay Singhal. They decided to come together and start a venture in the mobile market. The company started as mKhoj and later pivoted to serve ads as they saw the app market ripening at InMobi. The team moved to Mumbai to start up. Mohit says, "It gets difficult to move for other people as you spend time to think about it."

Mohit coded the first ad server for InMobi and has been at the helm of technology since then. He is the expert at building large-scale blueprints of complex architectures. When asked, he prefers to call himself a generalist, but is quick to point out that this may not work for everyone - 'in the initial days, it is the fundamentals that matter.'

When it comes to hiring candidates for technology positions for InMobi, Mohit says he makes it a point to meet every candidate who is selected and the process is very rigorous running to over 8-9 rounds. "Had I not been the cofounder, even I would not have been able to clear the interview rounds," he quips.

Talking about the phenomena of Software Engineers aspiring to be Managers, Mohit adds,

Other than InMobi, Mohit also works closely with the cancer services. Now he regularly helps other people. InMobi also raises funds for SVG Cancer hospital.

Talking about the future, Mohit says he wants to build a company that is not just a business but a mission.
